JANUARY 2023

FROM THE PASTOR

The first step in communicating our faith with others is having clarity about what it is that we have to share. And most of the time, the simplest, most engaging, and most powerful thing we can share is a story. Sharing the stories of our experiences of God communicates not only that God is active in our lives, but can help others to recognize God's presence in their own lives. Through Epiphany, we'll be helping each other recognize the presence of God in our lives by sharing our stories.

Milford Apetz and I will start us off.

One of the blessings of being a pastor is that I get to visit folks. I get to bring my own greetings, bring greetings from the congregation, and bring the bread and wine that bears God's presence. As I enter Milford's room, he is asleep, which is common for visits in care facilities, but a first for but a first for him. It is sad to see his continued decline. I wake him with a "hello" asking if he's up for a visit, and I at first receive a "no." I tell him I brought communion, and he wakes up further, recognizes me, and his eyes and smile communicate clearly what he has lost the ability to articulate verbally.

He attempts to verbalize, but I am not able to make out what he is saying. I finally make out a "thank you." I talk a little bit about Christmas, and how God comes to us as a savior, both to fix this world that we are in, and eventually to save us from it as he takes us to our heavenly home (a theme we have talked about in the past). He becomes even more lucid and affirms our common witness. But then his mumbling gets quieter, and his eyes close, and I wonder if my visit will end shortly.

But then, I hear a repeated "thank you." And even though his eyes are closed, his face begins -to express the gratitude of the now-better-articulated "thank you's." As he had often done in the past, Milford is leading us in prayer. His sense of gratitude and his deep faith are evident, even as most of the particular words he wishes to use continue to escape him.

If I was in bed with a body that was failing, and a comprehending mind hamstrung by communication challenges, I'm not sure gratitude would be my most prominent emotion. But visiting Milford has always been an uplifting experience for me. He is a grateful and faithful man who speaks easily of God's presence. I'm the professional minister, but my visits with him are chances for me to sit at the knee of an evangelist.

I make out maybe a tenth of Milford's prayer of thanksgiving, but I notice when his cadence changes a little, and I notice his eyes are now open, and I make out "you's" that are directed not to God but to me. His prayer had ended and he was now proclaiming a blessing upon me.

I take out the bread and wine and we hear again of how Jesus continues to come to us, entering into our places of discomfort and frustration and wonder and hope, giving us what we need to save us from our sinful selves. Milford takes it as the life-giving sustenance that it is; perhaps not necessarily wanting more time here on earth, but eagerly taking in the life that eternally comes from God. We say the Lord's Prayer together, our voices in unison even if the words are articulated differently.

We try to chat a little more, and we pray again, and I must go. For holy ground is not a place to stay, but a place from which to be empowered and sent out. God, through Milford, empowered me yet again to venture out to engage our community Christ's love.

And I trust that God will continue to find ways to empower you, too. This Epiphany season, let us share our stories! In doing so, we help others recognize and see in their own lives the presence of God.

Yes, we provided over 500 hats for the Christmas stocking program in 2022. And now we need to get started on hats for 2023. We have yarn available for those of you who knit and crochet, and fleece for those who prefer to sew hats. You can stop by St. Martin on Saturday morning, Jan 14, to pick up yarn or fleece, or stay and join others who are making hats. Everyone is welcome. (We meet at the same time the Sew and Sew quilters are in the Fellowship Hall, so you can also get to see some amazing quilting projects while you are there.)
